

Information on categorising the courses

Please note that all listed modules below should help you to classify your own modules you have passed during your former studies. Of course it is possible that you have completed courses which can also be allocated to one of the listed areas below however its titles cannot be found within the listed modules.

Business Administration/Management Studies

Consideration is given only to subjects whose essential content is taught as a major in the Bachelor's programme for Business Administration at the University of Cologne which include:

- Financial Accounting
- Cost Accounting
- Channel Management
- Decision Analysis
- Financial Management
- Capital Investment and Financing
- Marketing
- Operations Management
- Organization and Human Resources
- Production and Logistics
- Corporate Management and International Management
- Fundamentals of Accounting
- Corporate Development
- Optimisation Methods
- Business Ethics

For more detailed information on the content of major subjects in the Bachelor's programme, please refer to the PDF Bachelor Module Catalogue which helps you to allocate your own modules to the subjects. On that account please compare the content description of our modules with your own ones.

Thus, notably the following courses listed here as examples are not considered in the field of Business Administration:

- Business Law & Taxes
- Applied courses, e.g. Marketing in Publishing Companies
- Business Information Systems or Vocational Education
- Business English/ Communication

Economics

Consideration is given only to subjects whose essential content is taught in the Bachelor's programme for Economics at the University of Cologne which include:

- Microeconomics
- Macroeconomics
- Economic Policy
- Labor Economics
- Public Economics/Fiscal Policy
- Monetary Theory and Policy
- International Economics
- Game Theory
- Growth and Employment
- Industrial Economics and Competition Theory
- Managerial Economics
- Energy Economics

For more detailed information on the content of major subjects in the Bachelor's programme, please refer to the PDF Bachelor Module Catalogue which helps you to allocate your own modules to the subjects. On that account please compare the content description of our modules with your own ones.

Thus, notably the following courses listed here as examples are not considered to the field of economics:

- Business Law
- Theory and Practice of Public Corporations
- Regional Economics
- Accounting & Taxation

Statistics/Mathematics

In the field of statistics and mathematics only courses with methodological expertise can be considered.

- Mathematical Methods
- Descriptive and Economic Statistics
- Probability and Statistical Inference
- Linear Algebra
- Analysis
- Econometrics
- Financial Mathematics (Percentage / Interest Calculation, Calculation of Annuities / Amortisation)

For more detailed information on the content of major subjects in the Bachelor's programme, please refer to the PDF Bachelor Module Catalogue which helps you to allocate your own modules to the subjects. On that account please compare the content description of our modules with your own ones.

Thus, notably the following courses listed here as examples are not considered to the field of economics:

- Informatics
- Information systems
- Engineering
- Applied statistics and mathematics (such as SPSS)

Political Science

Consideration is given only to subjects whose essential content is taught in the Political Science elective under the Bachelor programme for Social Sciences at the University of Cologne which include:

- Introduction to Political Theory and History of Ideas
- Introduction to European Politics
- Introduction to International Relations
- Introduction to Comparative Politics
- Seminar on Foreign Policy
- Seminar on International Politics
- Seminar - Political Theory and History of Ideas
- Seminar – Comparative Politics
- Governance
- Electoral Systems and Party Systems
- Social Policy
- Current Topics of Political Science
- Integrative Social Science

For more detailed information on the content of major subjects in the Bachelor's programme, please refer to the PDF Bachelor Module Catalogue which helps you to allocate your own modules to the subjects. On that account please compare the content description of our modules with your own ones.

Thus, notably the following courses listed here as examples are not considered:

- Social Work
- Social Education
- Education/ Pedagogy
- Ethnology

Sociology

Consideration is given only to subjects whose essential content is taught in the Sociology and Empirical Social Research electives under the Bachelor programme for Social Sciences at the University of Cologne which include:

- Introduction to Sociology: Microsociology
- Introduction to Sociology: Macrosociology
- Analysis of Social Structure
- Theories of Sociology
- Structure and Changes of Societies
- Networks and Organizations
- Sociology of Welfare state
- Current topics of Sociology
- Research project empirical sociology (practical seminar sociology)

For more detailed information on the content of major subjects in the Bachelor's programme, please refer to the PDF Bachelor Module Catalogue which helps you to allocate your own modules to the subjects. On that account please compare the content description of our modules with your own ones.

Thus, notably the following courses listed here as examples are not considered:

- Social Work
- Social Education
- Education/ Pedagogy
- Ethnology

Empirical Social Research/Methods

Consideration is given only on subjects whose essential content is taught in the field of Empirical Research as a main subject in the Bachelor Programme Social Sciences at the University of Cologne. Furthermore, quantitative modules in the field of methods and related subjects will also be taken into consideration as well as modules of the elective “Quantitative Methods of Economics and Social Sciences”, which include:

- Introduction to Empirical Research Methods of Social Sciences
- Practice of Survey Research
- Theory and Methods of qualitative Social Research
- Basic of Scientific Working in the Social Sciences
- Project Seminar in Empirical Social Research
- Introduction to Statistics for Social Sciences
- Methods and Concepts of Economic and Social Sciences
- Analysis of Multivariate Data
- Selected Quantitative Methods
- Applied Econometrics

Health Economics

Consideration is given only to subjects whose essential content is taught as part of the Bachelor programme for Health Economics at the University of Cologne which include:

- Healthcare Management
- Quality Assurance and Quality Management*
- Anthropological Foundation of Social Policy
- Ageing and Social Space in the Welfare Mix
- Basic Principles of Health Economics
- Health Care System
- Applied Seminar in Healthcare Management
- Basic Seminar in Healthcare Management

(* The course will be assigned to the field of medicine, if the lecturer is a physician or a pharmacist.)

For more detailed information on the content of major subjects in the Bachelor's programme, please refer to the PDF Bachelor Module Catalogue which helps you to allocate your own modules to the subjects. On that account please compare the content description of our modules with your own ones.

Medicine

Consideration is given only to subjects whose essential content is taught in the medical part of the Bachelor programme for Health Economics at the University of Cologne which include:

- Relevant Diseases and Case Studies I-II
- Introduction to Medical Ethics
- Quality Assurance and Quality Management*

(* The course will be assigned to the field of health economics, if the lecturer is not a physician or a pharmacist.)

For more detailed information on the content of major subjects in the Bachelor's programme, please refer to the PDF Bachelor Module Catalogue which helps you to allocate your own modules to the subjects. On that account please compare the content description of our modules with your own ones.

Methods of Health Economics

Consideration is given only to subjects whose essential content is taught as part of the Bachelor programme for Health Economics at the University of Cologne which include:

- Decision Analysis
- Health Economic Evaluation
- Evidence-based Medicine I - II
- Methods of Clinical Epidemiology

For more detailed information on the content of major subjects in the Bachelor's programme, please refer to the PDF Bachelor Module Catalogue which helps you to allocate your own modules to the subjects. On that account please compare the content description of our modules with your own ones.

Thus, notably the following courses listed here as examples are not considered:

- Statistics
- Scientific Work
- Modules of Health Economics (not methodological)
- Health law

Informatics

Consideration is given to all courses in the field of Informatics such as graph theory, logic, programming or computer science.

Information Systems courses cannot be considered.

Information Systems

Consideration is given only to subjects whose essential content is taught as a major in the Bachelor programme for Information Systems at the University of Cologne which include:

- Database Systems
- Systems Analysis and Architecture
- Information Systems Management
- Decision Support, Analytics, and Business Intelligence Systems
- Management of Information Systems Projects
- Integrated Information Systems
- Laboratory Course on Development

For more detailed information on the content of major subjects in the Bachelor's programme, please refer to the module catalogue which helps you to allocate your own modules to the subjects. On that account please compare the content description of our modules with your own ones.

Thus, notably the following courses listed here as examples are not considered:

- Decision Analysis
- Operations Management
- Media Economics and/or Media Management
- Information Management, provided the course does not belong to the subject area of Information Systems
- Courses in Business Administration
- Courses in Informatics
- Programming courses and/or internships under the Informatics curriculum that solely seek to convey programming skills